

W

is for the Western Snowy Plover

This delicate seabird lives on beaches along the West Coast. Beachgoers and their pets often frighten (or even chase) plovers, which disrupts the birds' feeding and resting cycles. This is especially stressful for plovers during breeding season, when parents must feed both themselves and their young.